It was a year of changes, too many for some, too few for others.

It was a year of moon walks and countless marches.

Astronauts took steps for mankind while moratorium supporters stepped for peace.

Voices of dissent were heard everywhere and the "silent majority" grew louder.

American flags and peace symbols hung together from windows and from the bumpers of cars.

And somehow, Bethany was right there, caught up with everything, and at the same time, so far removed.

We were allowed and encouraged to reach outside and grow and develop, to become worldly and wise. We were able to find new horizons and share new ideas.

And yet we were also permitted and often urged, to stay within our brick walls and reap the peace and solitude and comfort they afforded.

Some of us went to extremes; we became only worldly or we stayed only comfortable.

And some of us were fortunate enough to share the two.

Bethanians are sensitive people faced with infinite opportunities and boundless possibilities.

To present on paper everything that these people represent and all that Bethany is, would be an impossible task.

This book can only attempt to capture the mood and being of Bethany and its people.

And it is dedicated to every student, faculty member, and administrator that makes Bethany the very special place that it is.

Quiet conversations . . .

And familiar surroundings . . .

Often provide the tranquility needed during the academic year.

Friendship

And the intermingling with others often provide a break from the tranquility.

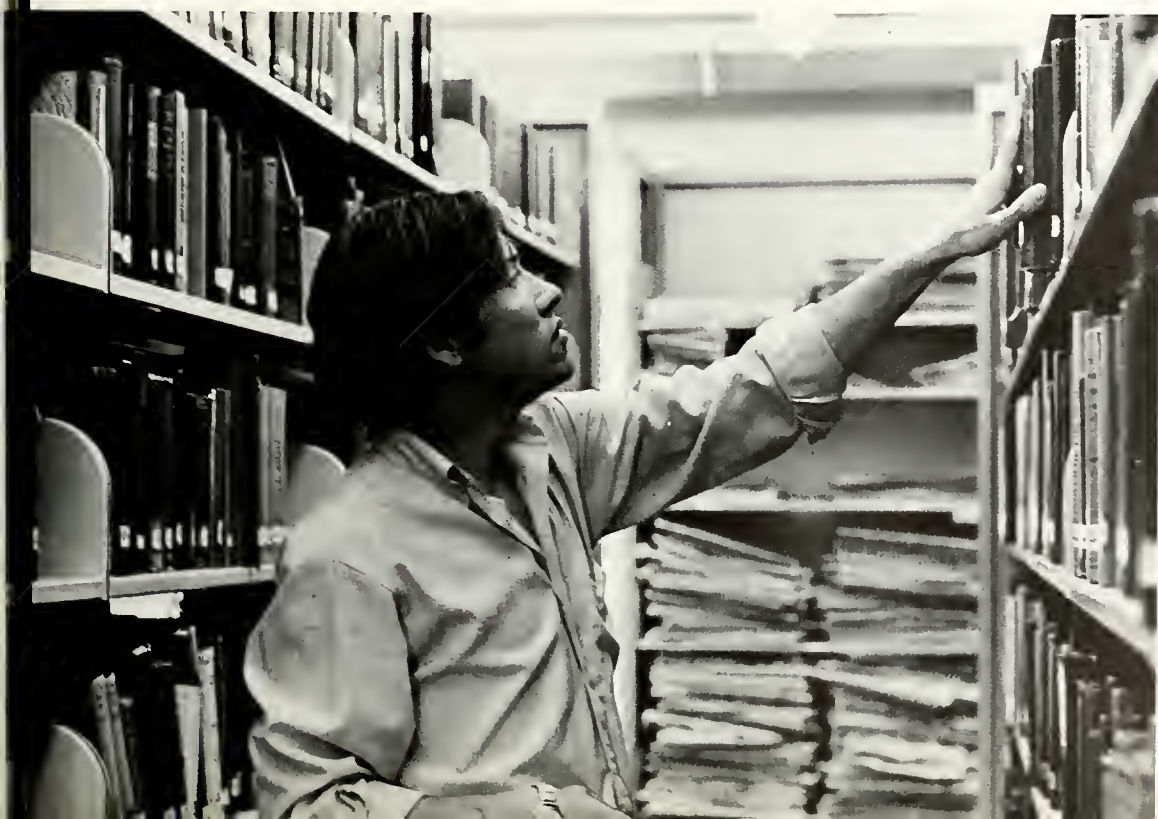

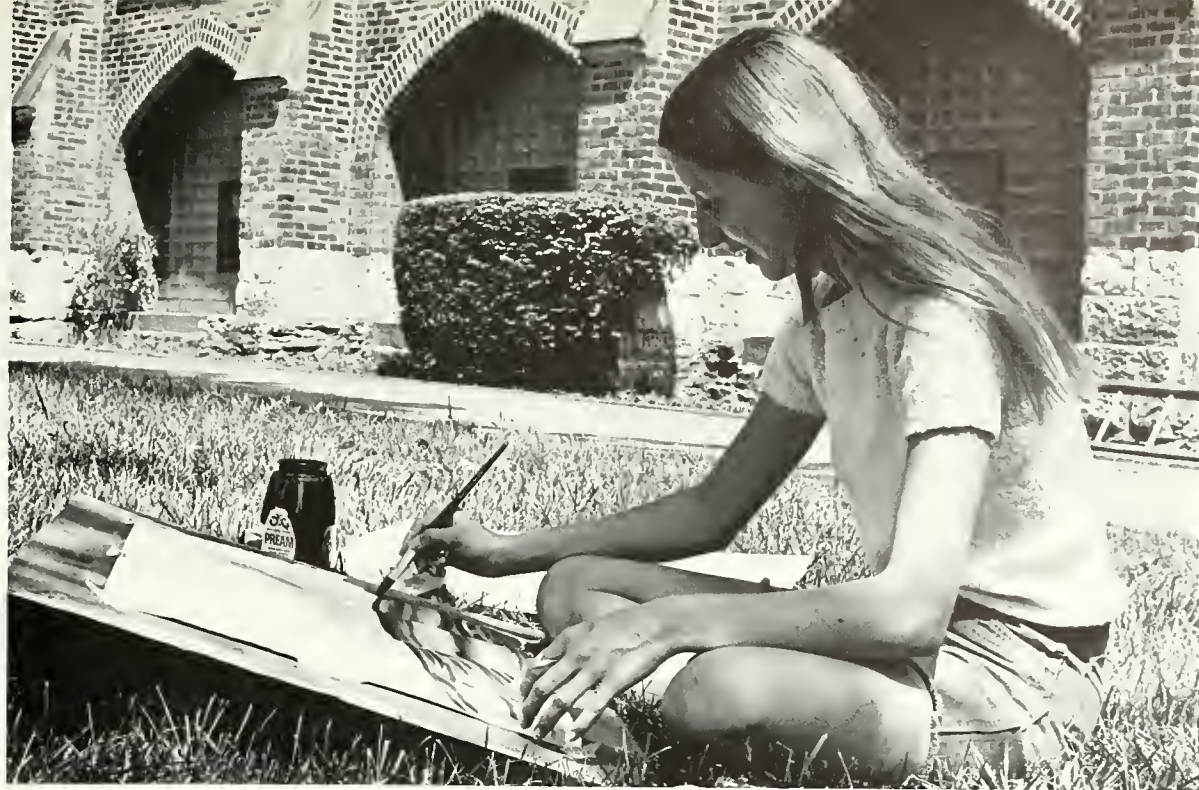

And yet, always,
there is a time
for aloneness.

A time to explore and to understand.

A time to know one's self.

Student Life

Homecoming

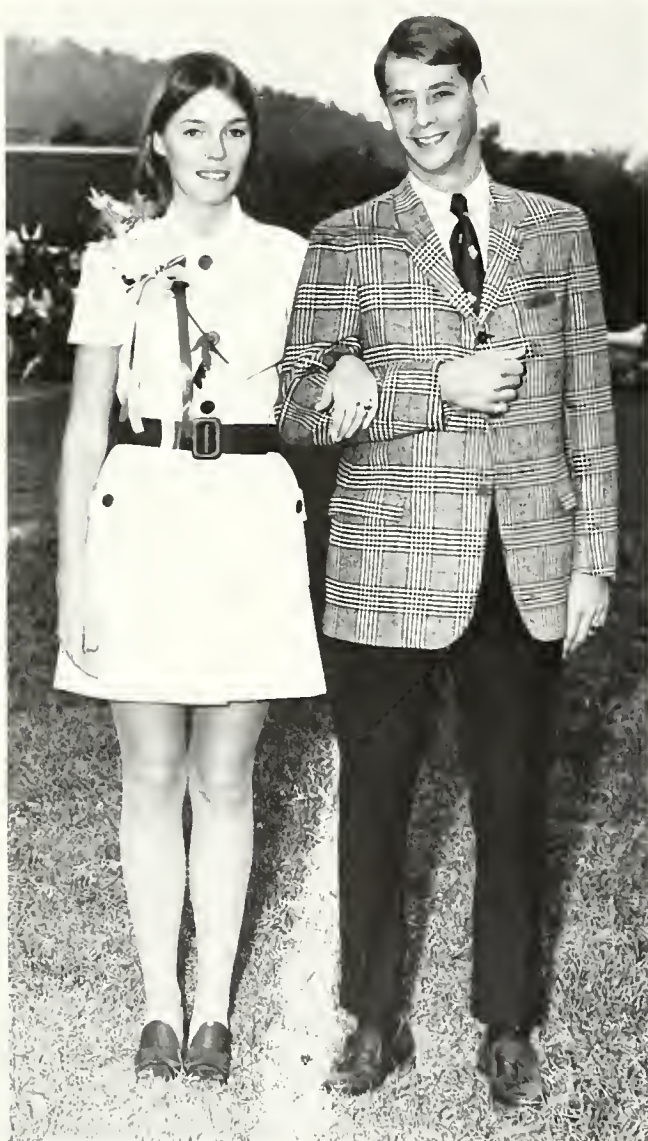

Following the Bethany-Case Tech game, the 1969 Homecoming festivities were highlighted by Lester Lanin and his Orchestra in Olgebay's Glessner Auditorium. Widespread alumni and student participation made this year's September weekend the most successful yet.

Donna Wood, Mary Eyman, Janet Pond, Sandra Jacquin and Joanne Putnam were the nominees for Homecoming Queen. Miss Putnam (left) received the honor.

Although the weather was dismal, spirits were kept high by fraternity and sorority open houses and the spirits they served their guests (upper right).

Our College Community

The Components

A campus is not merely a conglomeration of buildings and textbooks. It is something more; it is people — people whose individual lives interlock for a few hours each day and give the campus its living, breathing soul.

Bethany is one such campus. Its isolation from the bustling city and its small yet select enrollment foster intermingling with one another. The differentiation between academic status is practically negligible. Freshman or Senior — each is an integral component of the Bethany College Community.

College is not only an interlocking of thoughts and emotion. It is foremost an institution of higher learning where the student is both academically and culturally enriched. The Convocation Program at Bethany is designed to fulfill this multifaceted need for enrichment.

Accordingly, programs this past year ranged from Senator Packwood's lecture (right) during the Earth Day Conference to Eleanor Steber's recital at the dedication of Steinman Hall (far right).

The Pan Hellenic and Inter Fraternity Councils introduced second semester rush this year. Opinions as to the worthiness of this innovation were varied, but full pledge classes indicated that the second semester rush program is equally as effective as the former system had been in previous years.

Entertainment

The female vocalist of leading rock group, Cold Blood, entertains students at Rine Field House (above). In marked musical contrast, the Vogues (far right), a more modulated but equally forceful group, also captivates the audience.

Students (left) enjoy themselves at one of Bethany's all-campus parties.

This year's Social Committee under the direction of Hub Norton was able to satisfy the musical tastes of most everyone. Soul, hard rock, rhythm and blues, easy listening and folk music were all accounted for in the scheduling of groups. Folk singers Bat McGrath and Don Potter (middle picture) entertain students during Spring Weekend. Student Bruce Gorman converses with a member of the Vanilla Fudge back stage (far right).

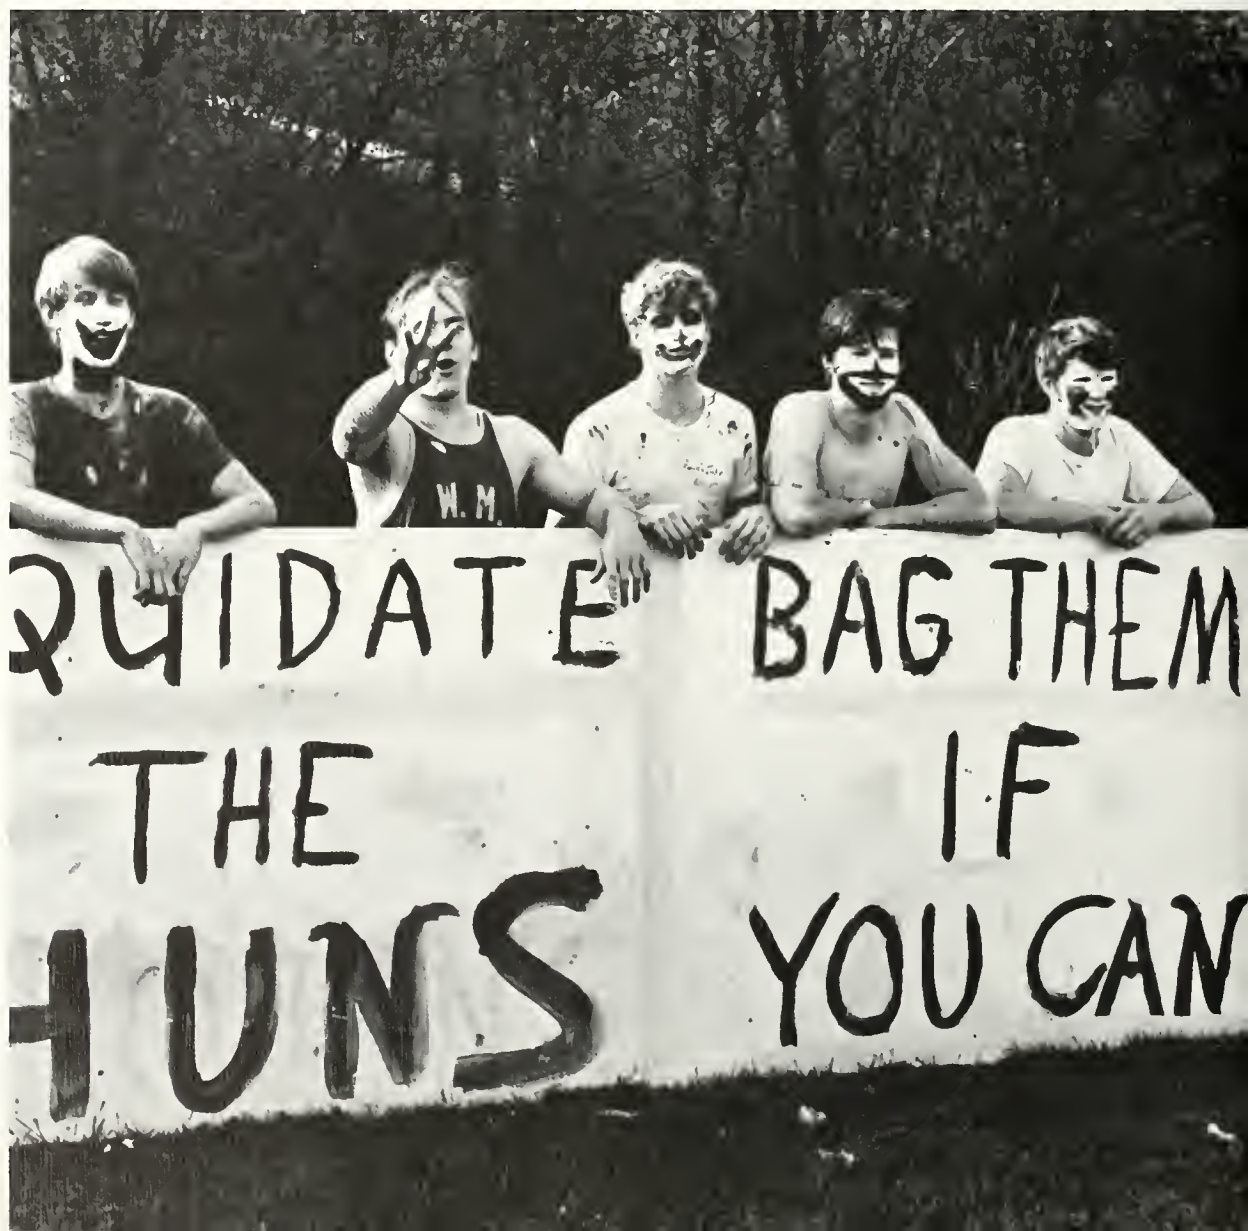

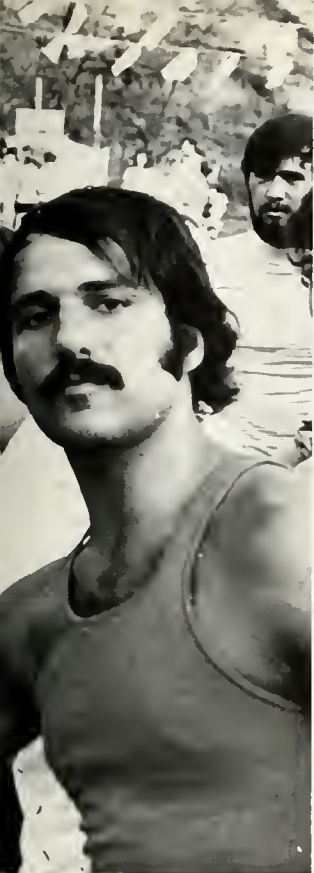

Spring Weekend

Friday, May 1, 1969, was a day of high-riding spirit and dripping mud as Bethany began its annual Spring Weekend. This year's theme taken from Italy resulted in toga-like dress and a festive Roman gala. As is customary, a king and queen were selected by the students from the many nominees. Mike Kaufman (below), Kappa Delta nominee, was honored as King while Georgianna Nanni, Woolery House nominee, was bestowed with the title of Spring Carnival Queen.

Greek Sing

Greek Sing was given its usual place of prominence on Mother's Day, Sunday, May 10, 1970. The participants were well polished and competition was unusually stiff. After considerable consultation among the judges the Kappa Alpha's under the leadership of Songleader Gary Strobel were finally presented with the award for the most vocally adept fraternity. The Zetas were the recipients of the sorority award.

(Below): Linda Aldridge directs the Alpha Xi Deltas.

Royal Hunt of the Sun

Not Pictured: Fantastics, The Visit, Three Penny Opera

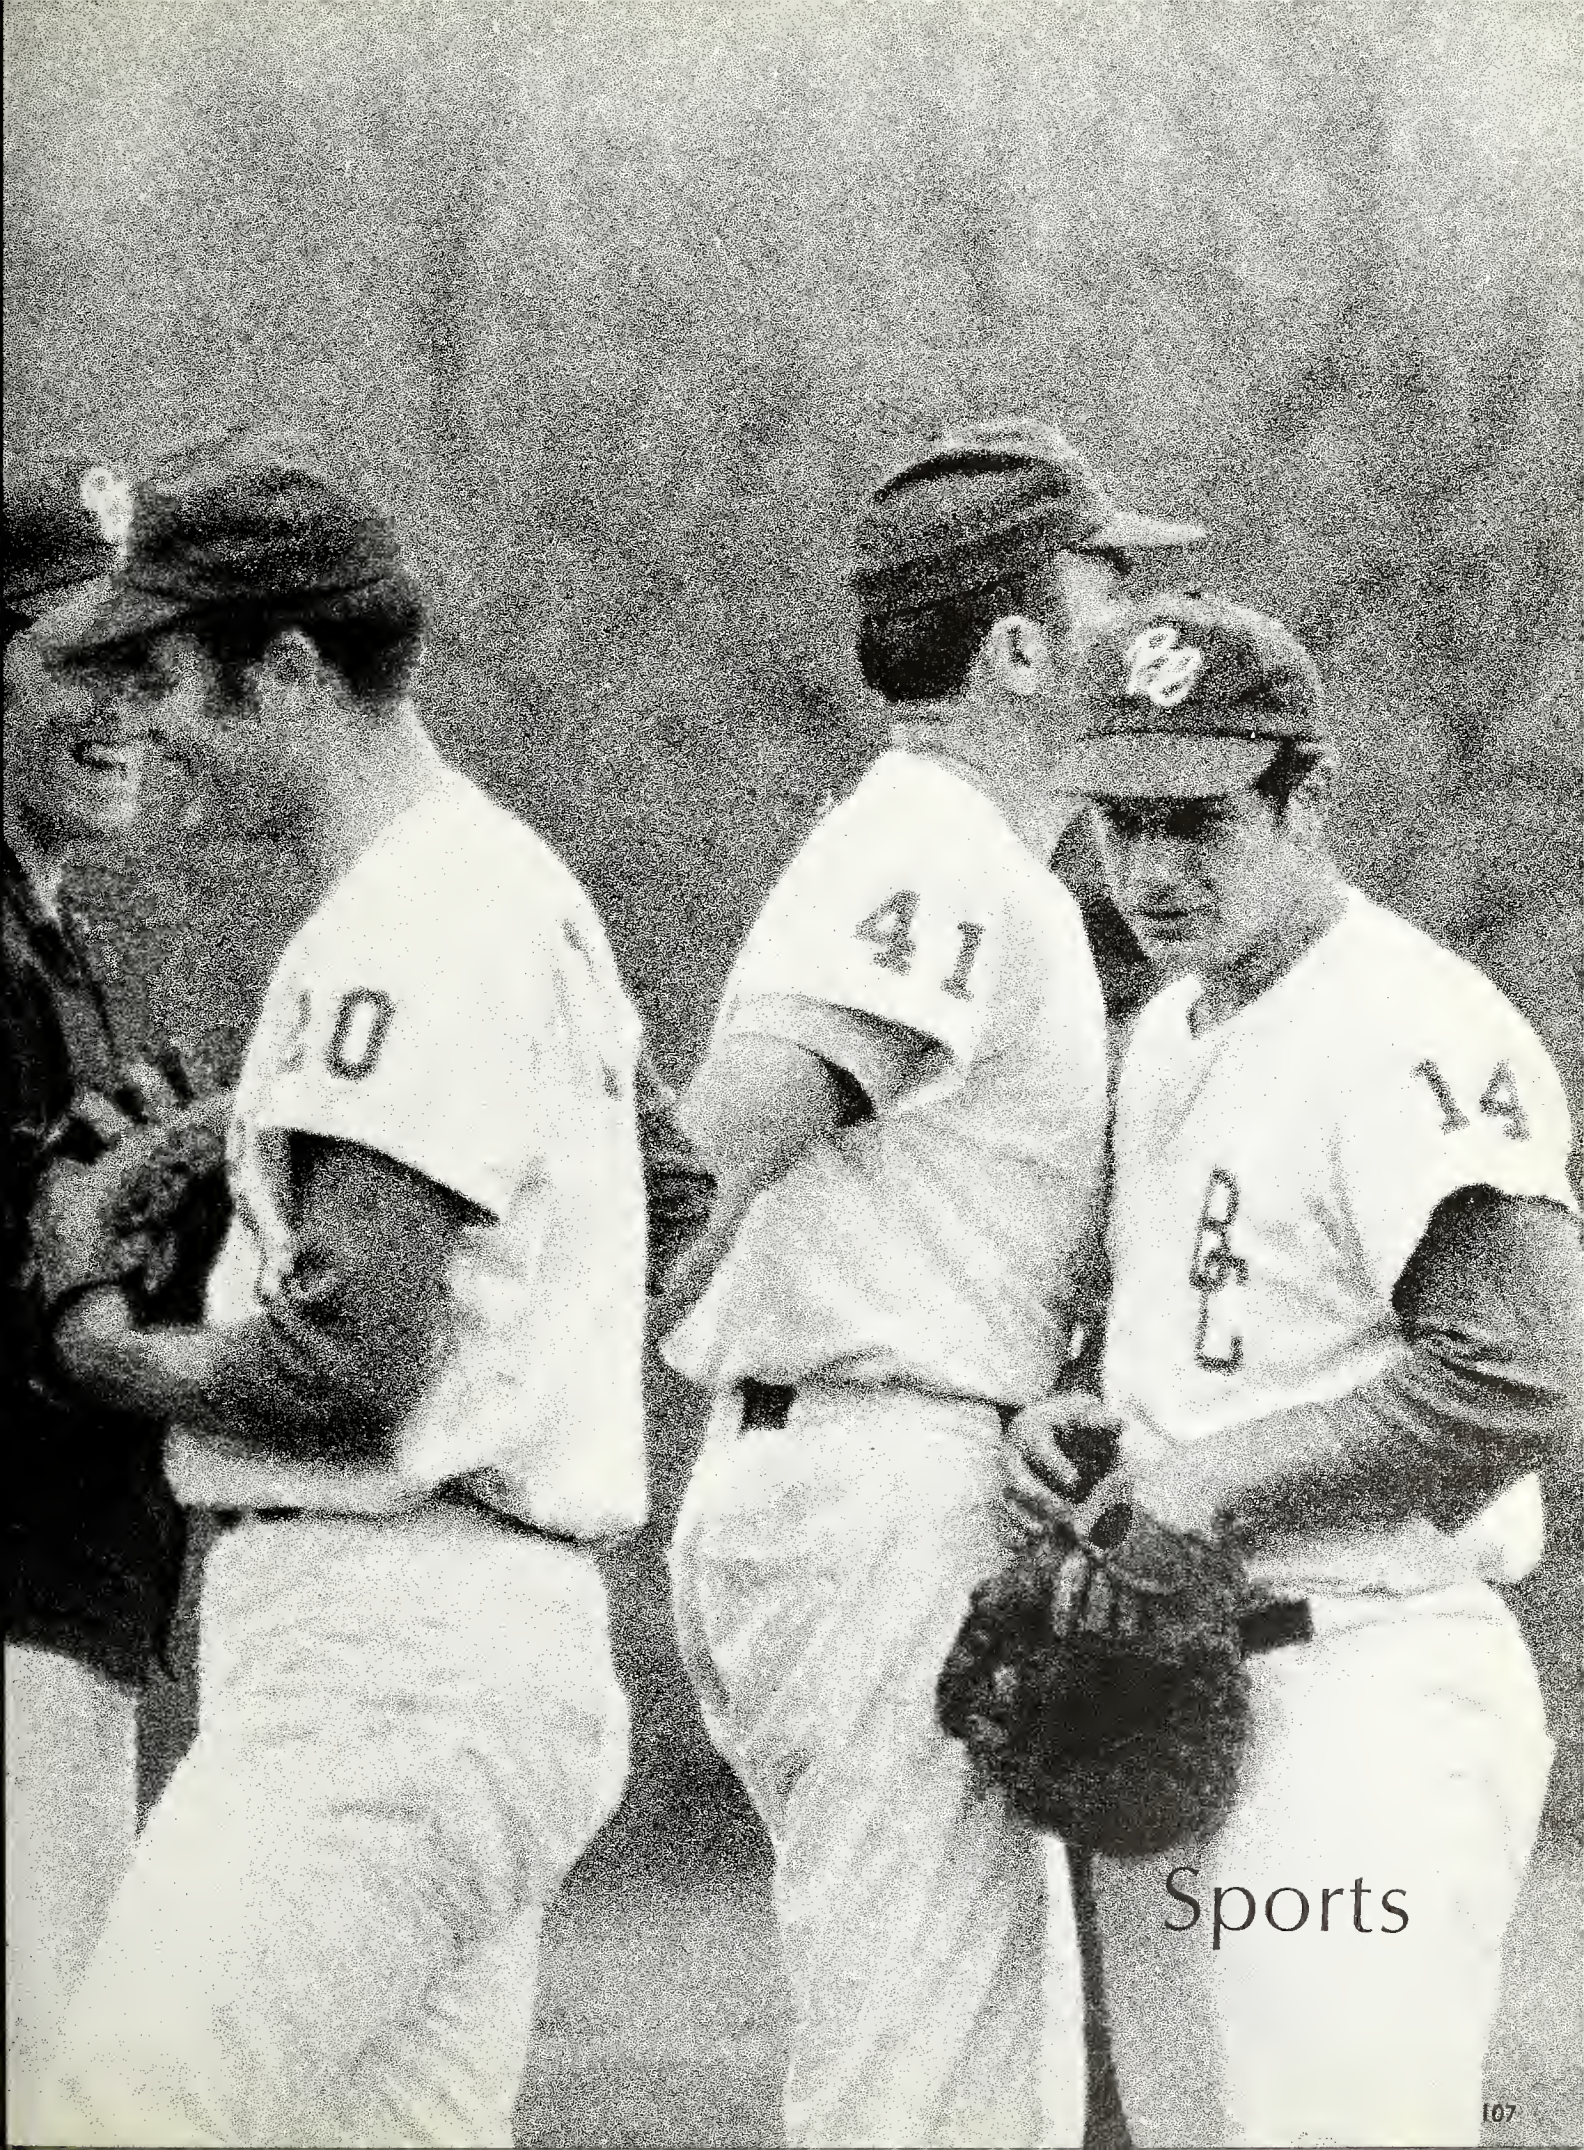

With the onset of this school year the era of PEACE, LOVE and FLOWERS came into full swing. Whether evidenced by a simple smile (lower left) or by a mass demonstration for peace (left), the motive was often the same: a desire for freedom of expression. This freedom was virtually uninhibited by Bethany College administration and resulted in the eventual liberalization of College policies while maintaining College ideals and principles.
